Call for Application for the Post of Senior Editor of

Genocide Studies and Prevention: An International Journal

The International Association of Genocide Scholars (IAGS) is seeking one senior editor for its open-access, on-line journal, Genocide Studies and Prevention: An International Journal (GSP) (http://scholarcommons.usf.edu/gsp/). The senior editor will be a dynamic and nationally recognised researcher with a doctorate degree or equivalent possessing a strong publication record along with a wide-ranging background in the fields that comprise genocide studies, broadly conceived, and a strong commitment to keeping the journal the premier publication in the field. The appointment as the editor of GSP will begin immediately with the issue 9.1 (forthcoming in February 2015). The initial term for the editor will end in December 2017.

GSP is the official journal of the IAGS and publishes peer-reviewed scholarly research of the highest merit which advances understanding of genocide and related forms of mass violence through conceptual development, high-level analysis, and sophisticated methodology aimed at answering important questions. Through its excellence, the journal promotes deeper understandings of the phenomenon of genocide, raises awareness of it as an ongoing scourge, and investigates the means of preventing it and mitigating its consequences.

To fully serve the field of genocide studies, broadly envisioned to encompass related forms of mass violence, the journal will continue to develop its importance as a forum for the exploration of ideas and the publication of debates that promote serious conversations among academic scholars, policy makers, and field workers based in the many disciplines engaging genocide scholarship. These include anthropology, art, communications, criminology, economics, forensics, history, international relations, journalism, law, literature, military science, philosophy, political science, psychology, public health, religion and sociology. The IAGS and its journal are beholden only to the highest standards of scholarly research and publication, eschewing conflicts of interest and the appearance of conflicts of interest in their structures, their funders and their professional work.

Applicants for the position of editor should submit the following materials:

- Description of qualifications
- Curriculum vitae

Applications are due by October 15, 2014, and should be e-mailed as PDF attachments to christian.gudehus@rub.de

Dr. Christian Gudehus, Editor-in-Chief
Genocide Studies and Prevention: An International Journal
Ruhr-Universität Bochum
Fakultät für Sozialwissenschaft
Lehrstuhl für Sozialtheorie und Sozialpsychologie
Universitätsstr. 150
Gebäude GB 04/142
D-44801 Bochum
Germany