We have volumes 6 and 8 of this 15 volume compilation by Albert Eugene Casey and published in Birmingham, Alabama in the 1950s and 1960s. The contents relate mainly to North Cork and East Kerry.

I am keen to complete the set. Does anyone know where I can obtain copies? I have seen that it is available on microfilm through the LDS Family History Centres.

Bruce,

We have volumes 2-15 of the set, but are not interested in parting with them. We will be happy to do any look-ups for you, and copy a reasonable number of pages.

I recall hearing that the term indenture also referred to the act of the (often illiterate) party entering into the contract of servitude by biting, hence imprinting their unique dental imprint onto, the paper. In lieu of a fingerprint system it was probably worked, unless one lost all one's teeth due to malnutrition, poor health, got one's jaw broken, etc. This was in a lecture somewhere, so I cannot site a source unfortunately at this time.

According to "The New A to Zax," 2nd ed., by Barbara Jean Evans, p. 148, "England did not have a system for recording documents, so a lawyer's clerk would make two copies of a document. The original document was cut in half and each party took a half. An indenture was the actual cutting apart or indenting." Perhaps time and location determine where you'll find it used.

Hi. Could anyone on the list tell me what the monetary value of a 36 volume set (73 vols in 36) entitled "Jesuit Relations and Allied Documents : travels and explorations of the Jesuit missionaries in New France, 1610 - 1791" published in 1959. I've been asked to trade the set for another we would use more often, but I have to prove that the books we'd be receiving would be of similar value. Thanks for any assistance on this.

The top edge of the document shows the wavy, or "indented" margin that gives these documents their name. As a safeguard against counterfeiting, the copies given to all parties were placed together and cut in the margin in a wavy, irregular pattern, uniquely identifying the authenticity of each copy.

APPRENTICESHIP INDENTURE

"The Apprentice Indenture is rather an unusual document in that two copies of this document were originally made on one piece of paper and then cut in two. The matching of one copy to the other at any later date would prove the validity of such a document."

You can see what book dealers are asking for it (assuming copies are on the market) by visiting any of the following sites:

Hi all -

I have a cataloging question -- under what topics would you catalog a book with the following title and description?

"Turkish_Jews Mailing List
For Shephardic Jewish genealogists with roots in the former Turkish Ottoman Empire including Turkey, Serbia, Greece, and Yugoslavia."

I'm curious to see what you think, then will tell you why I asked.

Well, my first inclination was to visit the Library of Congress and see how they would catalog a book about a similar subject. So I went to their online catalog and found the following book:

Author: Weiker, Walter F.
Title: Ottomans, Turks, and the Jewish polity : a history of the Jews of Turkey / Walter F. Weiker.
Subjects: Jews -- Turkey -- History.
Jews -- Turkey -- Politics and government.
Judaism and state.
Turkey -- History -- Ottoman Empire, 1288-1918.
Turkey -- Ethnic relations.

Are you looking for single-word topics, or topics that look like Library of Congress subject headings?

Drew and all -
Would you also put this under each locality? In categorizing on my site, I would. Therefore I would put this one under Greece, Middle East, and Eastern Europe. Does that seem appropriate to everyone here -- from a librarian's standpoint?

speaking as a genealogy cataloger, if we had this book at ACPL, I would give it these headings:

Jews - Turkey - Genealogy
Turkey - Genealogy
Greece - Genealogy
Yugoslavia - Genealogy

Since Cyndi is not confined by the LC rules regarding place names, she can freely use 'Eastern Europe' and similar as she suggests!

> Hi

This is my first posting to this group. I'm the director of a small town library in Delaware, serving 6000 people. We have have several patrons interested in doing genealogical work, and we have microfilm of the old town newspaper, but we do not have a microfilm reader. I believe I can get a grant and some donations together for a machine, so cost is not a real issue, but I would like your opinion on what I should try to buy.

1. A simple read-only machine. - But I think everyone that uses it will complain.

2. A fairly cheap reader/printer - I am looking at the ALOS by Minolta in a couple of catalogs (Demco) This runs about $5000, and would serve our purposes, but will it break down a lot?

3. The state of the art M400 scanner, that is hardware for a PC workstation. This digitizes the image, and it can be sent or stored or printed by the computer. This costs about $8,000. Plus the computer workstation. Is this expense going too far for my small library?

Of course, the salesman says that I will regret buying the ALOS (which he will sell me, too) because a year from now I will realize the need for this state of the art machine. That the genealogy activity is increasing and more often than not, these researchers want to be able to take home a disk rather than a sheet(s) of paper. Plus if I ever wanted to put some or all of the Bridgeville News on the Web, in a data base, whatever- there's the means to do it. On the other hand, I can't see setting up a $10,000 workstation for the public to use, which means I would put this on a staff workstation, which means staff would be helping and doing perhaps more than we can afford.

Advice please! Bad or good experience with the ALOS or some other machine? Need for digitized research?

Thanks,

Carol,

We are a very busy library with a large genealogy collection. We still don't have the "State of the Art" machine! We have 5 microfilm readers and 2 reader/printers. Don't listen to that salesman--patrons want to take home sheets of paper. They crave those little sheets of paper!

Try locating a nearby dealer for Minolta. They will send you lots of brochures and price lists. There are several different versions of each model.

Good luck,

Had an odd query come by mail today. The woman sent a photocopy of the re-enlistment papers for someone who served at Fort Porter here in Buffalo, dated 1877. She asked us to search local papers for a notice about this gentleman's re-enlistment.

I'm having an assistant search two papers for 5 days after the date on the paper, just as we would for a death notice, but my hunch is that nothing will turn up. Has anyone ever seen peacetime reenlistments reported in local daily papers?

I checked both "The Source" and "Printed Sources" and found no discussion of newspapers in this context, and our guides to military research focus on acquiring official service records.

Hi Carol,

I'm not a librarian, except for my local genealogical society so I can't help you on the professional level. BUT, as a well-seasoned genealogist, I would place my 2 cents on the microfilm reader/printer. Even with all of my technical/computer skills - I still take great satisfaction in bringing home the pieces of paper! I know that the State Historical Society of Wisconsin purchases Minolta machines, but I'm not sure which model. And they're adding new machines lately and have not gone to computer workstations.

Plus disks (if you let people bring in their own) run the risk of viruses on your machine. Something that will never happen with a reader/printer. And it's a pain for you to have to hand out your own diskettes to each person each time they come to visit you.

Thanks!

We area larger library than yours and we have one reader only and one simple reader-printer. I agree that people really want those sheets of paper, and not the disks. As for the read only machine, it is only used in case the oither one is not available. Everyone wants to print. Hope this helps. Chris McHenry, Lawrenceburg Public Library

It was not uncommon for a re-enlistment notice to be printed especially in smaller towns. Perhaps depending on the Militia law for your specific state there was an annual cycle when enlistment's happened..ie. fall or spring musters. I have a good source book older actually that might help... e-mail

Dear Carol,

Another two cents' worth--pretty soon you'll be at a nickel! Our public library serving a city of 30,000 has three reader/printers (Alos, Minolta, Canon) and one reader (Bell and Howell). If you are only going to have one machine, get a reader/printer. Forget the "state of the art"; I echo everyone else's comments on that issue. Whatever machine you get, get a service contract.

Hope this doesn't overwhelm you with information, but here's my read on the various machines. Minolta--I recommend the ones that come with the work station table; easier on your neck for us old farts with bifocals and bad joints. You can change the settings to adjust to positive or negative microfilm (maybe not an issue for you yet) with the push of a button; get a zoom lens. If you have microfiche, you can also purchase a kit for that function. From time to time I have schools, auto parts stores, and local government agencies come in with their own microfiche records which they need to copy. Of my three machines, the Minolta is used and preferred the most by patrons and staff. The only downside to the Minolta is that it takes a black powder toner that is a little dusty to add but that's only every three weeks or so depending on use so it's hardly an issue.

The Alos is a brand new machine. It seems a little light weight compared to the Minolta but does a nice job. Ours is a table top model and is uncomfortable on the neck after about 15 minutes of reading film. (A lower table would solve that problem.) It requires changing a toner cartridge (no powder) to go from positive to negative film. Takes two minutes. Neat, clean. You can also purchase a fiche copier attachment as with the Minolta. My machine cannot accommodate a zoom lens, so we have two different lenses (18X and 35X) that can be changed in another two minutes.

Then there's the Canon.

You didn't ask, but I think we all would tell you to have a coin box installed. It will run around $500 but the change it generates will pay for your paper, toner, and service.

Good luck, Carol.

Carol:

Our public library serves about 25,000 plus and we just last year purchased 4 Canon Microfilm Scanner 400's and really love them. They are reader printers with interchangeable viewer lens. I definitely recommend getting more than one size lens if you are able to purchase more than one reader printer. We have 4 machines and two different size lens that interchange in one minute or less. They cost us just over $5000 apiece but I would not trade them because staff and patrons really love them. You should get one with fiche reader attachment. Not sure what that extra cost would be as we already had one from a previous Canon product that works well on the new machines. We have had all 4 machines for over a year and no service required as yet. However, I would recommend getting a service contract! Another librarian stated using coin box, that is probably a good set up but we don't use one. We just have the patron pay us. Our volume is not so high that it causes us any problems. You definitely want to have printer capability. Genealogists do still like paper to take home, despite what your salesman told you. He evidently is NOT a genealogist.

Hope this helps along with the other good advice you received.

Hi,

Me again! A note about the size of the lenses. I recommend you get what Minolta lists as size 1 and size 2.

Size 1 is the best and only size that will work with a federal census record to fit it all on an 8 1/2 x 11 sheet of paper. Size 2 works with all other types of materials. Size 3 is also available, and just makes the smaller print easier to read - but I think a size 2 does that fine for the most part (and I wear bifocal glasses myself!)

Thanks!

I am in charge of a genealogy Collection in a medium sized public library. We have two reader/printer (3M) and have three readers we do not have any machines hooked to computers although we do have three computer to use for genealogy on the internet, Family Search, and Genealogy CD-Roms. Our patrons seem quite happy with the services we do provide.

This is my first posting to this group. I'm the director of a small town library in Delaware, serving 6000 people. We have have several patrons interested in doing genealogical work, and we have microfilm of the old town newspaper, but we do not have a microfilm reader. I believe I can get a grant and some donations together for a machine, so cost is not a real issue, but I would like your opinion on what I should try to buy.

1. A simple read-only machine. - But I think everyone that uses it will complain.

2. A fairly cheap reader/printer - I am looking at the ALOS by Minolta in a couple of catalogs (Demco) This runs about $5000, and would serve our purposes, but will it break down a lot?

3. The state of the art M400 scanner, that is hardware for a PC workstation. This digitizes the image, and it can be sent or stored or printed by the computer. This costs about $8,000. Plus the computer workstation. Is this expense going too far for my small library?

Of course, the salesman says that I will regret buying the ALOS (which he will sell me, too) because a year from now I will realize the need for this state of the art machine. That the genealogy activity is increasing and more often than not, these researchers want to be able to take home a disk rather than a sheet(s) of paper. Plus if I ever wanted to put some or all of the Bridgeville News on the Web, in a data base, whatever- there's the means to do it. On the other hand, I can't see setting up a $10,000 workstation for the public to use, which means I would put this on a staff workstation, which means staff would be helping and doing perhaps more than we can afford.

Advice please! Bad or good experience with the ALOS or some other machine? Need for digitized research?

Dianne,

We've been thinking about adding an internet terminal in our Local History and Genealogy Department. However, the terminals we have in the main public library reading room are constantly in use by people surfing all over the net and doing their email. Do you have a policy or procedure that governs your genealogy internet terminal so that it is used primarily for that purpose?

We are in a separate room and in addition to the regular internet policies governing time limits, etc., we have a policy that governs our room that says it and its resources are to be used for local history, Georgia and Ga. history and genealogy research. So far, it has not been a problem.

We figured the computers with internet access were one of its resources, soooo ...

Carol,

We are very happy with our old Canon PC80, although not quite as happy with their replacement model, the MP90. Neither involves scanning technology -- just regular, old, high-quality prints from microfilm. I'm sure there is a Canon dealer covering your area -- but don't know if they'll help you find a PC80!

A year ago, the I looked at several digital reader/printers to replace an aging Minolta analog machine. I was interested in getting a digital machine because I thought that was the wave of the future. Both Minolta and Canon make digital machines that we compared.

What I found was that both brands had two sets of displays for the patron to work with when using the scanner hooked up to the computer. One for the scanner and one for the computer. Believing that this setup would involve significantly more staff time assisting patrons in making a copy, I wound up buying a digital machine, but have never hooked it up to a computer. Hooking the computer up is an option that remains open, though.

I believe you will benefit from hearing the experiences of those libraries that have hooked their digital machines up to a computer.

I am in charge of a genealogy Collection in a medium sized public library. We have two reader/printer (3M) and have three readers we do not have any machines hooked to computers although we do have three computer to use for genealogy on the internet, Family Search, and Genealogy CD-Roms. Our patrons seem quite happy with the services we do provide.

> Hi

This is my first posting to this group. I'm the director of a small town library in Delaware, serving 6000 people. We have several patrons interested in doing genealogical work, and we have microfilm of the old town newspaper, but we do not have a microfilm reader. I believe I can get a grant and some donations together for a machine, so cost is not a real issue, but I would like your opinion on what I should try to buy.

1. A simple read-only machine. - But I think everyone that uses it will complain.

2. A fairly cheap reader/printer - I am looking at the ALOS by Minolta in a couple of catalogs (Demco) This runs about $5000, and would serve our purposes, but will it break down a lot?

3. The state of the art M400 scanner, that is hardware for a PC workstation.

This digitizes the image, and it can be sent or stored or printed by the computer.

This costs about $8,000. Plus the computer workstation. Is this expense going too far for my small library?

Of course, the salesman says that I will regret buying the ALOS (which he will sell me, too) because a year from now I will realize the need for this state of the art machine. That the genealogy activity is increasing and more often than not, these researchers want to be able to take home a disk rather than a sheet(s) of paper. Plus if I ever wanted to put some or all of the Bridgeville News on the Web, in a data base, whatever- there's the means to do it. On the other hand, I can't see setting up a $10,000 workstation for the public to use, which means I would put this on a staff workstation, which means staff would be helping and doing perhaps more than we can afford.

Advice please! Bad or good experience with the ALOS or some other machine?

Need for digitized research?

Thanks,

Carol Gasior, Director

estate and to be referred to in this way? I can interpret the phrasing in two ways-"here with me at my side" could be metaphorical perhaps meaning that young John is under his care as an infant. Or it could be literal indicating that John is actually present for the signing of the will, presumably as an adult. John is not listed as a witness.

>Among other things the abstract states:
"Nephew John Clark, here with me at this time - remaining half of my estate, also my right and claim in Ireland."<

Interesting question. Some questions of my own occur.

My initial guess would be that the gentleman had more than one nephew named John Clark, perhaps another remained in Ireland, and the phrasing was a means of identifying which nephew he meant. It also seems to imply he is living in his household. But yes, such a bequest could have been made to a 2-year-old child. I'd be curious to know under what circumstances the will was written . . . did write it with death imminent, or was he merely writing a will. If it was the former, I would think he would have named a guardian to manage the bequest, but if it were the latter, he may have expected to live another 50 years.

In any case, I don't think you can accurately interpret it without examining the original, not relying on an abstract. I'd also be looking into the guardianship records if you are looking to prove this record refers to the 2-year-old subject of your search.

Just my two cents worth. . .

Probably means living there in the household at that time without regard for as as the child's parents may have predeceased the Uncle. Also probably means that any right, title, or Interest that would pass by right of descent through the Uncle is forwarded to the nephew. All this depends on the Probate law for specific state when the testor resided and died.

She is concerned with the best ones to go to for education, of coarse but because of her disability is concerned about that as well. If someone can e-mail privately with some ideas I would appreciate the input.

These are the schools she is looking at attending:

Massachusetts - Amherst, Athen Ohio, Albany - New York State, Wilmington North Carolina.

I am hoping some of you librarians would be better informed.

Hi,

>My question is- is it plausible for a two year old to receive this >kind of >estate and to be referred to in this way?

I found Helen Leary's book to be quite helpful for this question. Do you have the new revised version? On page 43 is stated "Although a man could buy or be granted land before he was twenty-one, he could not sell it in his own name." So yes it is possible for a very small child to be given this kind of property. I have seen N.C. wills before giving land to very small children, and I don't think it was uncommon. Land just seems to have been given to the heirs regardless of age. Of course, minor children needed someone to handle the land for them. This is discussd on page 189: "Property might be inherited by persons unable to handle it because of age or infirmity. In these cases, probate authorities appointed guardians, conservators, receivers, trustees, or collectors to manage the property for the benefit of its owner." Perhaps such a person was appointed and is not mentioned in the will. Has your researcher looked for estate records or other sources that might give more information?

It is a day for minors...just before I read your message, I was helping someone else via email with a will in which the testator left a portion of his property to his wife, with the condition that it go to their son, an "infant" (meaning just about any age from 0-15 or so), if she should die or remarry. Nothing concerning a guardian or trustee was mentioned in this will either. The patron's question was, at what age was the child no longer a minor, which led me to snoop around Leary's book looking to verify the age of 21.

Anyway, I hope this helped!

Greetings GENEALIBers!

If you are coming to Salt Lake for the Salt Lake Institute or for skiing, we cordially invite you to a Utah Library Association Genealogy Round Table Talk N' Tour on Jan 19.

SPEAKERS: We are proud to present two of the foremost LDS leaders in genealogical librarianship.

David E. Rencher, Director of the Libraries Division, will speak on "Plans and Directions of the Family History Library." David was recently interviewed in Wired (July 1999).

Brent F. Griffiths, Area Manager for the Field Support and Services Division, will report on his August International Federation of Library Associations meeting in Bangkok and his presentation at the Librarians Serving Genealogists/Federation of Genealogical Societies meeting in St. Louis.

TOUR: We have made special arrangements with the library for a "behind the scenes" walking tour of staff areas including the cataloging, collection development, bindery, and photoduplication units, and high density storage.

WHEN: Wednesday, January 19, 12:30 p.m. The time is between sessions of the UGA sponsored Salt Lake Institute of Genealogy to allow participants to attend.

WHERE: Rm. 134/136, main floor, Family History Library. The library is at 35. N. West Temple across the street from Temple Square. Food is not permitted in the building, but there are nearby mall restaurants.

PARKING: There is no longer a patron parking facility, but there are pay parking lots a block west (call 801-715-6752 and Ray will fax you a map showing their locations). If you are coming by TRAX, the library is at the Temple Square Station.

Hope you can come while you are visiting Salt Lake!

If you have questions, please contact a member of the steering committee:

Hello friends-

I just wanted to be sure to say "Thanks" for all the free advice I received. This was a great help to me. I was really surprised at the number of responses that came my way. I have decided to try to get a microfilm reader/printer, but I've also added a PC to the grant application because of the surge in new materials on CDs. This will also become a word processing workstation. (Everything needs to be multifunctional in a small library!) Thanks again!

Dianne,

We've been thinking about adding an internet terminal in our Local History and Genealogy Department. However, the terminals we have in the main public library reading room are constantly in use by people surfing all over the net and doing their email. Do you have a policy or procedure that governs your genealogy internet terminal so that it is used primarily for that purpose?

I am seeking comments and experiences from public librarians who have had library lock-ins. I know the Dallas Genealogical Society has held several at the Dallas Public Library and they raise a good amount of money. My patrons have expressed a desire that I hold one at our library, but first, I have several questions.

1. Most lock-ins that I know of are sponsored by a society, so, who gets the money? Has anybody had problems with their city objecting if the society gets the funds and uses it to buy material for the library? (If my library gets the funds I know it will have to all go into the city's general fund, period. In that case, I just lost interest in this whole thing!)
2. Security problems, the library will not want to staff the building with anyone other than me.
3. My boss is also worried about the propriety of people paying to use a public library, even if it is after hours.

There are probably other issues and questions I haven't thought of yet.
I will appreciate all comments.

Since we have a Tech. Center with 16 PC's and several free standing PC's, all with Internet access on other floors, we were able to persuade our administration to allow the restriction of the one Internet access PC in our area to genealogy & history use. We have a sign to which we can point and we tell any potential users that our machine is restricted and the PC's in all the other locations are available for other use. Before we had this restriction we had groups of kids playing games, people checking e-mail, visiting chat rooms, etc. When we added Ancestry.com with its license fee, we had no trouble convincing our administration that we needed to have continuous access to databases related to our subject area.

I am not a genealogical librarian but I am a volunteer in the genealogical collection at the Fairfield County District Library in Lancaster, Ohio as well as being affiliated with the Fairfield Co. Chapter of The Ohio Genealogical Society. We have a wonderful working relationship with the library and have had a lockin the last 4 years at the library. I actually got the idea from the public library in Emporia, Kansas where my cousin was the genealogical librarian. Anyway, we usually have at least 50 people attend. We don't charge for this event since it is held in the public library. There is always just 1 paid library employee and she arranges her schedule so that she comes in at 4:00 pm and works until midnight. That way the library doesn't have to pay anyone overtime. We ask that everyone bring a snack to share and we make sure that we have plenty of volunteers to help researchers. We usually have some door prizes and those who come don't have to stay a certain length of time but once they leave the building they are not allowed to return (unless there are special circumstances).

Hope this helps and if you would like more input from a former genealogical librarian with a lot of experience holding lock-ins please feel free to e-mail Gayle Gardner at gayle1@wheatstate.com

Message-ID: <032301bf5dbe$3b41ca40$65075cc3@stuart>

I am currently updating my 'Londoners Occupations: a genealogical guide', which is to be published by the Federation of Family History Societies, and which aims to identify published sources on occupations in the historic City of London & County of Middlesex which are likely to be of genealogical interest. In the years since the first edition was published, I have identified many additional titles, which will be incorporated in the 2nd edition. However, in a book of this nature it is impossible for any one individual to identify everything that is likely to be relevant. It occurs to me that some people on this list may have used the 1st edition, and perhaps have noticed errors and omissions, or know of books which have been published since. If this is the case, I would be grateful if I could be informed of items which ought to be included in the 2nd edition. Please reply to my email address below.

Thanks for your help.

The only similar functions we have had were in conjunction with workshops or seminars put on by our local genealogical groups. Maybe about 3 in 20 yrs.

Our library closes at 5 on Fridays, and the seminars took place on Saturdays. We called them "early-birds" and there was no charge to use the library. We usually opened from 530-9 for persons who had come from out of town to attend the seminars. And of course they paid for the seminars, but they were usually held at a different location than the library.

Our Genealogy Friends of Plano Libraries, Inc. gives a lock-in quarterly. It is always on Friday nights from 6-11pm. They've just begun stretching it from 5:30 to 11. They do charge $10 plus $4 for pizza. We have a program room where we can eat.

The lock-in serves two purposes. It is a fundraiser plus a learning experience for our genealogy patrons. The Gen. Friends provide volunteers for instructing the patrons and we provide 2 librarians and a page for any assistances and security. We have an average of 45 total that attend. Some of the areas of instruction are: Introduction to Library, How to begin, Family History Computer, CD computer (census and census indexes, marriage indexes, etc.), microfilm reader/printers, Internet and Ancestry.com, some one on one time, and time to do personal research.

It is a big success. The Dallas Morning News Plano News section just had an article on it. The lock-ins began in 1998.

I believe a society would really need to put it together. It takes a lot of time and energy. A staff member does have to be present for security reasons. I don't think you have to charge but it is a good fundraiser. The Gen. Friends have been able to add significantly to the Genealogy collection. Does that answer some of your questions?

We are not a public library, we are a private, society library. But, I thought I'd throw my two cents worth in, anyway.

We have done this a few times, and it's always very popular. We stole the idea from the Iowa Genealogical Society, which, again, is a private society library. So we don't have to deal with the money issue and where it goes.

We've charged $10 - and run it from 6 pm to 6 am, and call it an "All-Nighter" rather than a lock in. I think the Iowa called it a Slumber Party. Most don't make it all night, but lots do. Half the cost goes to snacks & pizza at midnight. The other half goes to purchasing library materials.

Nobody has ever complained about the cost -- they have most all been members who can use the library for free -- they love the opportunity. We usually get lots of people from out of town who take the opportunity to do a long stretch of research.

Hi Folks,

Some libraries allow a genealogy society to retain ownership of the genealogy collection, but store it on open shelves for an unlimited amount of time. Usually the library encourages volunteers from the genealogy society to man the area and help genealogical researchers, even if they are not wise enough to hire a genealogical librarian.

For more info on genealogy societies, see the Genealogy Societies section of my online tutorial Librarian's Guide to Helping Patron's with Genealogical Research:

Last Year we planned a lock-In in July and the response was so great that we had to have two to accommodate the patrons. These were very successful. Ours was a joint effort between the genealogy society and the library. The GS provided Pizza and snacks, and many volunteers to assist the patrons with the computers. We used all the public Internet computers throughout the library and we also had Three Library staff for each area i.e. Local & Family History, Adult Services Area, and Audio-Visual Area. We are very fortunate here because we have Library staff who were willing to help with the Lock-In. One comment A Genealogy Lock-In is a lot of work but it has been a very successful program and we are planning to do this annually.

Subject: [genealib] library lock-ins

I am seeking comments and experiences from public librarians who have had library lock-ins. I know the Dallas Genealogical Society has held several at the Dallas Public Library and they raise a good amount of money. My patrons have expressed a desire that I hold one at our library, but first, I have several questions.

1. Most lock-ins that I know of are sponsored by a society, so, who gets the money? Has anybody had problems with their city objecting if the society gets the funds and uses it to buy material for the library? (If my library gets the funds I know it will have to all go into the city's general fund, period. In that case, I just lost interest in this whole thing!)
2. Security problems, the library will not want to staff the building with anyone other than me.
3. My boss is also worried about the propriety of people paying to use a public library, even if it is after hours.

There are probably other issues and questions I haven't thought of yet.

I will appreciate all comments.

>My question is: How can we justify buying and collecting records for >ANY specific county?

By showing historical migration patterns. If a large number of people in County A came originally from County B, or another state or country, then you have a case for buying the materials about those places.

My city, for example, has more Polish-Americans per capita than just about any other, so we buy *everything* that pertains to Polish genealogy.

Hope this helps!

Over the past 4 years our library has hosted 2-3 "Genealogy for Nightowls" lock-ins a year that have been very successful. Responsibility for organizing them has alternated between our department (about 2/3s of the time) and the local genealogical society. Our library administration has looked at it as a mixture of service to patrons and good publicity for our department. They've been held on Friday evenings from library closing at 5:30 to 1 a.m. Generally, all dept'l staff work part of the time (I'm generally on the late-late shift), and get to do their own genealogy (or go home) the remaining time. There is also a custodian for locking people out of the building and accompanying them to their vehicles, who otherwise works on special projects in the building (s/he gets fed during the event as well).

Part of the event has been a catered buffet dinner and midnight snack, and periodic door prizes (paid for or 'acquired' by the sponsoring body); the charge has usually been $8-10 for society members and $10-12 for non-members, with library staff gratis. This covers the meal and door prizes, so we don't look at it as a fund-raiser. We generally advertise it for non-beginners and have always had a full house, with most participants staying until we sweep them out the door at 1am! We have also offered computer disks for sale and scanning services for patrons. Since many of our local genealogists work shifts at the local auto plants, they welcome a non-standard time to be able to come in to do research. Our department can only accommodate 25, so setting up extra work tables and bringing in an extra microfilm reader from another dept. isn't a major problem. Food is eaten at tables in an adjacent hallway (although these evenings we do allow drinks in the department in tightly-lidded travel mugs), and there is access to a staff lounge for more comfort, soft drinks and restrooms.

It's been a lot of fun and I highly recommend it as an activity for other libraries.

One place for the society and the librarian to look is at the "Guidelines for developing beginning genealogical collections and services" at <http://nosferatu.cas.usf.edu/lis/genealib/glines-revised.html> (there is a link to this from the LSG page!

This shows that not only should local history items be pursued and collected, but areas from which a large portion of the area migrated from, both domestically and internationally should be covered. In this area, anything dealing with German backgrounds, Germans from Russia, and Czechs are vital because of the local settlement patterns.

Another factor would be -- who is paying for the materials? If it's the genealogical society, it's members research areas would be valid, especially if several are researching in the same general area. If housing is a problem, perhaps the society could also help with new shelving, etc. It is also important to clarify who actually "owns" the books once they are housed at the library!

Dear Listmembers:

You may remember my posts last year.

I am the President of the Marin County Genealogical Society.
We had the distinct displeasure of being told to REMOVE our collection from the County Library last year. We got no reprieve.
Our collection had been housed in the County Library for over 20 years. We had already been shifted from one branch to a second one early in the history of our collection.

We have no building of our own and meet in a church hall that we have rented for 2 nights a month for more than 15 years. [They have no space for our library, so we did not even ask.]

The reason we were given was that they needed the space for fiction and young adult books. Genealogy is the number one hobby in America, but they have no room for us! And in all honesty, I have heard that the new librarian for one of our branches has Rudyard Kipling off the shelves and stacked in his office due to space problems. For every book that is added, one must be removed.

Now all our books are packed in boxes and stored in a member's garage. No one has access. It is a crying shame. Our collection was not added to for years as the library limited our space and then reduced it. Folks wanted to donate books. We gave some away and we had silent auctions for others. It saddened the Board of Directors to do this, but we had no other option.

I find that Historical Societies are better able to attract those social butterflies that have money to donate than are Genealogical Societies. We are working on establishing a closer tie with the Historical Societies in our county, however, we still have no guarantee of space for our collection.

Our founders worked toward establishing a library and over time, I suppose folks got complacent as our books were housed. Now it seems we are back at square 1, only 23 years have passed. If anyone has good information on grants for buildings, we sure could use it! I have come to the conclusion that if we want a library, we must build one.

Regards,

Lauren

While this won't help Marin County, it points out to the rest of us how important it is to keep those pesky statistics, so we can show how many people are using our collections. That way we, or our directors, or our trustees, can justify the space allocation to any challengers.

Cyndi:

As a genealogy librarian who DOES do genealogy and is a member of my local genealogy society, my suggestion would be that maybe they should try to encourage this librarian to come to one of their genealogy meetings so that she could learn the importance of these books. Then, the gen. soc. should have a very special meeting that would show her this. Maybe they could express how they do their research and how they have to become detectives and all that.

This may help their cause. Also, they would want to explain how much new interest has been garnered into genealogy of late and how it could really bring more people into the library!

Just wanted to pass along a little success story, because you never know when one will drop into your lap...

I had gotten a call from a correspondent at the local paper who was going to be doing a feature. I had the presence of mind to chatter with her for forty-five minutes and offer to set up a couple of photos for their photographer the next day. The online condensed version of the article is on the Web at:

<http://www.wisinfo.com/centralwisconsinsunday/index.html>

As usual, some of the "quotes" are actually slightly bowdlerized versions of what we actually discussed over the phone. But the message has a chance to get out, which is definitely a good thing.

The lesson? As much as anything, just to be ready to show off your collection whenever the opportunity presents itself!

Hello all -

Thank you to all of the people here who shared their thoughts, advice and opinions on the topic. I have forwarded your notes to the lady who originally posted that message:

Joyce Gore Locke <jglocke@yucca.net>

Joyce wrote to tell me that she was very grateful for all the help she received from everyone.

Thanks again - you're a great lot!

Hi All -

Our International Vital Records Handbook by Kemp is in shreds, and it has been out-of-print for ages. Last I heard from the vendor (Gen Pub Co), there was supposed to be a new edition published in November, but it is still listed as out-of-print. Have any of you discovered a website that accesses the vital records addresses and policies/prices of ALL states?

I've found and bookmarked individual states, but it would sure save time to have a single source. I don't know about all of you, but I have patrons using this source every day. If anyone has found a wonderful website or alternate print source, could you let me know?

Thanks!

In your opinion, who is the best vendor for census on cd-rom materials and would you share their web address please.

Thanks!

Dear Amy...
Glad to know that you are finding great use for the International Vital Records Handbook. The 4th edition is more than 800 pages long, twice the size of the 3rd edition. It has been expanded to include adoption records as well as the previous birth, marriage, divorce and death records.

This edition was not planned for release in November but for the new year. GPC received the mss. in the Fall and expects it out early this year.

All the best,

In addition to Tom Kemp's excellent work and the Internet web site, that old standby "Where to Write for Vital Records" was just reissued by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in an edition updated on 9-7-99. It sells for $2.50.

A short note to tell about one periodical I have for trade:

Ohio State Archaeological and Historical Quarterly, issues, Jan 1953,
July 1953, Oct. 1953 and Jan. 1954, all hard bound.

This was later called Ohio Historical Quarterly and is now called Ohio

Amy, Drew and all -

I want to point out two relevant categories on Cyndi's List where you would find these types of links:

Primary Sources

<http://www.CyndisList.com/primary.htm>

Central entry points for many U.S. resources online can be found on Cyndi's List under:

General U.S. Sites

To specifically answer your question about vital records info online, I know of four such sites:

Family History SourceGuide - Where to Write for Vital Records

<http://www.familysearch.org/sg/WheToWri.html>

VitalChek

Certified copies of birth certificates, death certificates, marriage certificates and other vital records.

GenAnnual@aol.com has sent you a story from <http://newsnet.byu.edu> Here it is:

MyFamily.com ranks high in Nielsen/NetRatings

MyFamily.com Inc., an Orem-based company, was ranked 19th overall in page views in December, according to Nielsen/NetRatings' report of top properties on the Internet.

The report indicated that MyFamily.com's network of sites, including <A HREF="http://www.myfamily.com">MyFamily.com</A>, <A HREF="http://www.ancestry.com">Ancestry.com</A>, and <A HREF="http://www.familyhistory.com">FamilyHistory.com</A> received more than 136 million page views during December.

This ranking placed MyFamily.com higher in number of page hits than well-known names such as BarnesandNoble.com and Etoys.com.

MyFamily.com CFO Dave McGinn credited the popularity of the sites to their universal appeal: everyone has a family, he said.

The Nielsen/NetRatings report also showed that users have been spending an average of about 38.2 minutes per person per month on MyFamily.com sites, making them fairly 'sticky' sites.

Curt Allen, CEO of MyFamily.com, says this is an Internet success story because the site focuses on the family. 'Features such as voice chat, online family photo albums and online family trees allow people to connect and strengthen the family bond while continually returning and spending time on our sites,' he said. MyFamily.com gives users the ability to create their own private web page and post photos and information on it. McGinn says, 'In a virtual way we allow families to have the same interaction they have in the real world.' Ancestry.com is the Internet's largest genealogical database. McGinn said Ancestry.com makes more than 530 million records available to users on more than 2000 databases. FamilyHistory.com functions primarily as a site for message boards for family research. MyFamily.com Inc. is dedicated to connecting and strengthening families using the World Wide Web. Thanks for your thoughts and good ideas.
If we had the internet computers available and some seasoned researchers available for personalized help and consultation, and maybe a short beginners class at the beginning... hummm, there are lots of possibilities. If part of the money goes for a midnight snack, that should help keep the city's hands out of it. This is a good programing idea. I'm presenting a plan to our

The actual count of loss was 1406 books mostly from water damage due to sprinkler head activation to put out the fire. These books were 000s through 929.3755. That represents about half of the printed collection - no original documents or microfilm were damaged. We have completed an inventory of those volumes lost and are in the process of determining replacement. I imagine at the end of the process we will have a list of titles that cannot be reacquired and we will post that list in the hopes that libraries might have duplicates that they will be willing to donate.

We were very lucky in terms of the entire building and have just about completed clean up efforts.

The project is based on files in the Library's Carolina Room that record information about the men from Mecklenburg County who died during World War II. The site includes photographs, a searchable database of Mecklenburg County war dead and links to related sites. It also recognizes the people who created the original files following the war. Related W.W.II links are included under "Learn More." Information within the site will be of interest to local historians and genealogists.

We use the "Microfiche Housing Frame" for binders, available from Brodart Library Supplies (800-233-8959 or <http://www.brodart.com>). This is a sheet that holds 32 fiche and fits in a 3-ring binder. I chose this method of storage over sleeves and a file drawer because the tech Processing staff can treat them more like books, and I can interfile them with books. My genealogy collection has very few microfiche right now, and this seemed to be more economical and spacesaving than buying a file.

Family Tree Maker for Windows works on Windows computers. Check and see if they have a network version if that is what you need. They might sell you a lab pack of 5 or 10 copies if you have a lan for your patrons to access software.

It seems to me that The Master Genealogist will run on Windows NT - that in one of Dick Eastman's newsletters he mentioned running it on NT. But you might want to contact them and check it out. Their web page is at <<http://www.whollygenes.com>>

In my opinion, it's the best genealogical software on the market. It may not be the most intuitive or produce the fanciest charts - it just does the best job genealogically speaking. Excellent for source citation.

Dear Lynette,
Thanks for the suggestion. I've bought from Brodart for years and will surely take a look at the catalogue. What I'm really seeking is individual transparent sleeves to keep our patrons fingers off of our tender fiche sheets. We have just acquired the Index to Texas Death Records for modern years and the film is so unrealistically soft.

We once got some sleeves from Highsmith that work well but they don't handle the product any longer. Gaylord has some that would be fine but they are wildly expensive. (The sleeves cost more than the fiche!) Anyway, I appreciate your advice and will keep digging. :-)

I use Ultimate Family Tree occasionally on my NT workstation and it has no apparently problems. Of course UFT isn't being very well supported by its parent company at the moment, so I wouldn't recommend buying it. They may be phasing it out.

Filby Prize for Outstanding Genealogical Librarianship.

Now is the time to submit nominations for the Filby Prize offered by the National Genealogical Society and Scholarly Resources. Do you know someone who is a librarian with at least five years experience whose primary focus is genealogy and local history and is employed in a public, academic, or special library? If so, you might know the next recipient of the $1,000 award. March 1, 2000 is the deadline for nominations. Individuals can also nominate themselves. The Prize is named in honor of author and librarian P. William Filby.

Judges use the following criteria:

- 1.. Significant contributions to patron access to information, or to the preservation of historical records.
  - 2.. Development of an imaginative reference tool or similar outstanding contribution of enduring consequence that fills the gaps in existing information, accuracy, scope or usefulness of genealogical and local history materials.
  - 3.. Publication of a book or a body of articles that have contributed significantly to the field of genealogy or local history and that are of an interpretative nature.
  - 4.. Other activities that have significantly advanced genealogy and local history
  - 5.. Work that has encouraged others to be innovative in the field.
- Nominations should include personal and professional contact information with illustrative examples of the nominee's performance as a librarian who serves genealogists. Please send bibliographic citations rather than publications. Completed nominations can be sent to the National Genealogical Society, 4527 Seventeenth Street North , Arlington, VA 22207-2399. Attention : Filby Prize. The deadline is March 1, 2000.

Family Tree Maker for Windows works on Windows computers. Check and see if they have a network version if that is what you need. They might sell you a lab pack of 5 or 10 copies if you have a lan for your patrons to access software.

Good morning!

Two additional books that might be added to the "genealogy in fiction" list:

All the Mamas by Carol Shough (a children's title)
Riding Shotgun by Rita Mae Brown (there is time travel involved, the genealogy link is more obscure)

Thanks for all who share their ideas, to Julie for maintaining the list, and to Drew for all his work on this list-serve.

This past year the La Crosse Tribune, a Lee Enterprises Co., switched from using UMI as a microfilm vendor to Heritage Microfilm based in Cedar Rapids, IA. The La Crosse Tribune film has been produced by this firm since May 1999.

We have noticed significant problems with the readability of each microfilm produced and suggest that if you have film from this vendor that you individually check each reel for quality. Some images are too faint; others are a "double image" as though the camera had been bumped during filming.

The La Crosse Tribune newspaper is currently in contact with Heritage Microfilm about this. Until this has been resolved, we have made a quick decision to keep the paper version longer than our usual 6 months.

I know there are other Lee Enterprise newspapers that have also followed suit by switching from UMI; the Wisconsin State Journal is one. We do not have film for that newspaper, so I cannot tell you what the readable quality is of that film.

In my copy, I see that the abbreviation us "ux" not vx. Probably "uxor," Latin for wife.

Also, my copy says "pui" not pue. Probably "puisne," Latin for younger, inferior in rank; junior.

Hope this helps.

I'm not sure about "pue" but I imagine "vx" is actually "ux" and stands for "spouse" or "wife". I looked in the book myself and "pue" may be children, but I'm just guessing.
