Hello everyone!

I just wanted to put you all on alert that there is a new virus circulating on some of the library listservs.

If you receive a message from anyone -- it may be someone you know, OR someone you don't know -- that says "kindly check the attached LOVELETTER coming from me." with an attachment called "LOVE-LETTER-FOR-YOU.TXT.vbs",
DO NOT OPEN IT!!!! Delete it immediately!

I have already received a copy of this virus from the WEB4LIB list, and I expect at the rate that it seems to be propagating, we may see it on a few others. There isn't a fix for it yet, so even if you are running antivirus software, it most likely will not be caught. Symantec (a.k.a. Norton) and the other antivirus companies are working on a fix.

The people who will be most prone to this virus are people using Microsoft Outlook for e-mail. However, everyone is prone if they run the attachment.
So, please, again, DO NOT OPEN IT....!

I have a duplicate book for anyone who wants it:

Inhabitants of New York, 1774-1776. Thomas B. Wilson. Genealogical Publishing, 1993.

It is an index to "over 13,000" names compiled from various lists. It looks like a good source, just not relevant to Guilford County/NC genealogical research.

I would love to be offered something relevant to NC or to states on the migration paths to or from NC, but I will not hold out for such.

Send an address and I will send the book.

The Arkansas Genealogy Society Board heard some distressing news at its meeting last Saturday. Dr. John L. Ferguson, Director, announced that the State Building Services may move the History Commission and Archives to a new location in order to use its space for a secured computer facility. He was told by SBS representatives that there was no money for a new History Commission building and that it would be placed in some older structure facility. The new location of course would not have the facilities to properly preserve archival material, house the microfilming and conservation functions and adequately serve the public.

Dr. Ferguson said, "It is going to ruin us if we have to give up these quarters. We are helpless without the physical environment we have."

The History Commission and Archives was situated in One Capitol Mall building in 1979 and secured there by Act 933 of 1985. It may require another act to move it.

The Arkansas Genealogical Society has committed to doing everything possible to prevent this proposed move and we ask everyone to join our effort. This would affect people through out the world who are researching Arkansas related material.

Has anyone had good or bad experiences with indexing software? This week two people at the library mentioned projects they want to index. One man has years of research he is about to publish in four to six large volumes. The other is an existing work rich with local names but without an index. Would it make indexing the existing work any easier to do if it was first scanned into a computer? It was typewritten in the early 1950's. Suggestions for indexing techniques and/or software would be greatly appreciated.

To GENEALIB subscribers:

I am happy to forward the following information written specifically for GENEALIB by Angela Smith of KBYU regarding the new Ancestors series.

Drew Smith
GENEALIB list owner

Ancestors, the highly successful PBS series, is back with an updated format and 13 new episodes shot on location around the world. The new series emphasizes the world of records, making it an exciting research tool for beginning and seasoned genealogists alike. Whether your library has an extensive collection of local history and genealogy records or whether you get only an occasional query about family history, the combination of exciting research stories and expert advice in this series can help your patrons to get involved and to be successful in their search for roots.

But Ancestors is more than simply a how-to PBS series. The project includes a number of educational materials, including: --an instructional website, with links, downloadable research forms, and information about record types (often as video clips!) --an online teacher's guide, designed for grades 7-12 or community education programs --an instructional guidebook, a step-by-step guide to the research process family historians follow --instructional videos, designed especially for use in classrooms and other teaching settings.

For more information on any of these items, or for broadcast dates and times in your area, please visit us online at www.kbyu.org/ancestors

We encourage you to send this message to other librarians and genealogists who may be interested in hearing about Ancestors. We appreciate your help in spreading the word and hope that this project will help your library patrons and other researchers find the best ways to search for ancestors.

The Honorable Charles W. Taylor
Chairman
Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations Committee on Appropriations
House of Representatives
Room H-147, The Capitol
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I am writing to express my profound concern and dismay with the appropriations cuts recommended by the Subcommittee on Legislative Appropriations last week and agreed to by the House Appropriations Committee on Tuesday, May 9. The cuts will mean the reduction of 435 skilled GPO personnel and the elimination of public access to a significant body of Government information, and could jeopardize GPO's ability to support Congress' printing and information product needs.

Salaries and Expenses of the Superintendent of Documents. If enacted, the cut in this appropriation will have a disastrous impact on public access to Federal Government information by literally dismantling the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP), the Government's primary and longest-serving information dissemination activity. Every one of the 1,337 depository libraries nationwide will feel the following impacts, as will the estimated 9.5 million people who use these libraries every year:

* The 60 percent reduction in this appropriation will force our library program staff to be cut by nearly two-thirds, affecting 85 skilled information and library specialists and distribution personnel. Many of these employees are recognized throughout the library and information community nationwide for their expertise in the Government information field. The loss of their skills and capabilities from the public access arena will be incalculable.

* Altogether, public access to nearly 40,000 titles, or the majority of all titles made available through the program, will be affected. Approximately 25,000 of these titles are available in tangible format only, as determined by their issuing agencies, not the GPO. By requiring all information dissemination to be in online format only, the funding cut will terminate public access to these titles, abruptly ending public access to numerous critically important Government information products, including most congressional hearings. Public access via depository libraries to Census 2000 data that will be released in the near future on CD-ROM will also be eliminated.

* Another 15,000 titles are available in both online and tangible formats, such as the U.S. Code and Supreme Court reports. While electronic access to these titles may continue, the public will not be able to use the printed products, which in many cases are the official, authentic versions of these documents. In an age when public access to these electronic documents is susceptible to a broad range of problems-from assurance of permanent availability to vulnerability to computer viruses-continued access in tangible formats remains absolutely essential. And it can be done for relatively little cost: the FDLP prints, catalogs, ships, and provides support services for all tangible formats for about $1.57 per copy, an incredibly efficient performance.

* The funding cut will undermine public access to electronic Government information products. It will terminate virtually all depository library support services, including program administration, designations, product acquisition, classification, inspections, training, and consultative services. One of these services involves providing necessary locator services to online Government information products. Another involves working with agencies to ensure that new information products are usable by the public. Yet another involves establishing public/private partnerships to ensure the permanent availability of online Government information products. The loss of these services will be devastating to electronic public access both today and for the future.

The cut to the Salaries and Expenses Appropriation will have other impacts as well:

* It will eliminate GPO's By-Law Distribution Program, under which certain publications specified by public law are distributed at the request of Members of Congress and Federal agencies. Agencies that receive statutory copies of publications under this program include the Library of Congress and the National Archives.

* It will virtually eliminate the International Exchange Program. Under international treaty, this program pays for the distribution of U.S. Government publications to 71 foreign governments that agree, as indicated by the Library of Congress, to send to the Library similar publications of their governments. Without providing copies of publications for international exchange, the Library is not likely to receive copies of publications from foreign governments.

Mr. Chairman, at a cost of approximately $30 million annually-about 1 percent of the legislative branch budget, which is itself only a small fraction of the overall U.S. budget-the

FDLP and associated programs provide the Nation's citizens with access to the most comprehensive range of Government information available, all under the direct control of the public's elected representatives in Congress. It is a well-managed program: only two years ago, the program was characterized as "a valuable public service" in the congressionally-directed management audit of GPO conducted by Booz-Allen & Hamilton, Inc. Most importantly, the FDLP is recognized both nationally and internationally as a model of how best to keep the public informed.

The funding reduction approved by the House Appropriations Committee, however, will destroy this program and along with it the Government's longstanding partnership with the American library community to provide the public with library-based access to Government information. I implore you to reconsider this decision and to restore our requested funding for this essential program and its associated functions.

Transfer of Superintendent of Documents Operations. The Committee has directed a study of the transfer of Superintendent of Documents operations to the Library of Congress. Part of this requirement is to transfer an electronic FDLP to the Library of Congress. However, we already transfer databases to the Library for use on Library systems, such as Thomas, so the need for the physical reorganization of these functions is not clear. Moreover, GPO Access is not created by the FDLP. The congressional and agency databases created for GPO Access-as well as transfer to Thomas-are the by-product of GPO's electronic printing systems. These are integral processes that cannot be transferred without transferring associated printing functions.

Other Superintendent of Documents programs that would be transferred would be the sales and agency distribution programs, under which GPO distributes publications, on a reimbursable basis, to recipients designated by Federal agencies. It is true that such a transfer was passed by the House in 1993, but only after it had been amended to transfer the right to bargain for wages along with the Superintendent of Documents' employees. However, when such a transfer was studied by the Library in 1994 and again in 1995, the Library expressed reservations due to its lack of experience in operating large-scale publications distribution programs. Also, the Library had reservations about separating the publications distribution function from GPO's production/procurement function, under which publications are obtained for sales and other distribution programs on a cost-effective basis with minimal administrative burden and cost. The removal of the distribution function from GPO could significantly increase the cost of making Government publications available to the public.

Congressional Printing and Binding Appropriation. This appropriation will be reduced by $7.8 million, or 11 percent, from the current year level as the result of a directive not to print any products not associated with the direct legislative business of Congress. The Committee has specifically recommended the elimination of the Congressional Record Index (which will result in the abolishment of the Congressional Record Index office, whose personnel are appointed by the Joint Committee on Printing). Also eliminated will be the 2000 edition of the U.S. Code and other miscellaneous congressional publications such as the Congressional Directory, the congressional Serial Sets, memorial addresses, and nominations, as well as Our Flag and engineering and agricultural reports submitted by Federal agencies to Congress, which are printed as numbered documents. In addition, funding is cut for Senate distribution of copies of the Congressional Record to public agencies and institutions, blank paper for the Senate, and GPO details to Congress.

The elimination of funding for these and other publications "not absolutely essential to the day-to-day operations and legislative activities of the House and Senate" calls into question the availability of this appropriation for related products, such as printing for the January 2001 inauguration of the President; printing for other miscellaneous publications, including the Pictorial Guide, Economic Indicators, House and Senate telephone directories, and treaties; and printing for other numbered documents such as The Capitol Magazine, the quarterly Statements of Disbursements of the House and the semiannual Report of the Secretary of the Senate, as well as printing performed under resolutions (including the pocket Constitution, How Our Laws Are Made, and Our American Government).

When combined with the elimination of printing for depository libraries and the absence of funding to pay the 2001 COLA for GPO's crafts employees, as provided in wage contracts approved by the Joint Committee on Printing, these workload reductions will force the reduction of 350 production personnel, more than a quarter of our production staff, whose value to Congress-in providing essential congressional printing services and making electronic information available via GPO Access-has been praised time and again by the Members and leadership of both the House and the Senate. Not only are their printing crafts services essential to Congress, but these same personnel make Government information products available online via GPO Access, which is made available for the use of other online services, such as the Library of Congress' Thomas. The staffing cut that this appropriation will require could very conceivably impact our electronic information services, especially if a RIF-which is enormously disruptive to the workforce-is required to meet workforce reduction goals. Accordingly, I urge you to reconsider this funding cut and restore this appropriation to our requested levels.

Transfer of Congressional Printing Funding to House and Senate. The Committee recommends a study of the transfer of the Congressional Printing and Binding Appropriation to the Clerk of the House and the Secretary of the Senate in 2003. However, it is not clear how such a transfer would be effected. For the past three years, the amount of this appropriation used by the House has averaged 38 percent. The amount used by the Senate has averaged 26 percent, while joint and other items, such as joint committees, the Congressional Record index, GPO's Congressional Printing Management Division, numbered documents authorized by both chambers (Our Flag, the pocket Constitution, etc.) have averaged 36 percent. It is not clear how these items would be divided between the two Houses. Similarly, it is not clear whether GPO would remain the Congress' source of printing and electronic information product services under this proposal, or to what degree Congress itself will experience increased costs and administrative burdens from the assumption of these new funds. Years ago, Congress created

GPO's Congressional Printing and Binding Appropriation to address all of these issues, and I strongly recommend that you reconsider this potentially unwieldy and costly transfer proposal.

GPO Revolving Fund. The Committee has not fulfilled GPO's request for $6 million for air conditioning improvements. Without an appropriation for this expensive project, the revolving fund will have to be used. As a result, the costs of the project will have to be recovered through printing rates charged to GPO's customers, including Congress. With less revenue coming in as a result of the appropriations reductions, the impact of this project on remaining revenues will be more significant.

Mr. Chairman, if these funding recommendations are enacted, they will significantly impair our ability to carry out our statutory mission, and they will profoundly impact the public's access to Government information. I urge you, in the strongest possible terms, to reconsider them.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL F. DiMARIO
Public Printer

Thank you, Kathy. This is also a good day to remember our own mothers, grandmothers, great grandmothers etc, back through the centuries. How many of these can we name today? Have we faithfully traced our maternal lines as well as our paternal ones? Can we tell the stories of our mothers of the past, and do we understand the lives they lead and the sacrifices they made in a world where women were often uneducated or undereducated, and spent the majority of their lives pregnant or nursing or both?

Unfortunately, there has been a lot more written about men's lives, and it is our privilege as genealogists of today, to rectify that picture by telling the stories of the women who preceded us. In that way we both honor our foremothers and give the world and our family a fuller picture of our shared heritage.

Here are a few stories about the women who have preceded me:

While looking up something else, I noticed that the American Association for State and Local History has an online submission form that may be used to get your organization into their next directory. It appears from previous editions that genealogical organizations are included along with history & heritage groups.

You can submit data about your library or organization to:

Hi folks,

Im new to the list, so thought best to introduce myself. I am a reference librarian for the Halifax Regional Library in Nova Scotia, Canada. We have a strong contingent of local patrons who use our services, but we also get a flurry of tourists in the summer. Our collection largely consists of local history, publications of the Genealogical Association of Nova Scotia, indexes to primary records, basic "how to" guides, maps, city directories, microfilm to the local newspapers and an obituary index to the Halifax Chronicle Herald.

I am the "specialists" for the system, largely because I am a reference librarian who happens to do her own genealogy on the side. I have given lectures to our patrons, workshops for local librarians through NSLA and APLA, lectured to GANS, and developed a program for school aged children interested in their family roots.

Beyond all this, I do actually have a question to pose to the group. We get a number of mail queries asking for obituaries, or about local history and the like. We offer a mail queries service whereby we will research up to a half hour to find an answer to their questions. In the past, we have only charged $3.50 for postage and up to 10 photocopies. This price is currently under review. I was wondering if anyone else offers this service and if so, what do they charge? Sometimes our actual research ends up being quite detailed-to a point, and it seems that $3.50 is a little low. I'd love to hear from others on how they offer this service.

Cheers,

Joanne McCarthy

Dear Joanne,

Welcome to the Club! Butler Area Public Library (Butler, PA) provides a similar corespondent research service. Because of public library policy, we are not allowed to establish a set fee. Consequently, I have adopted the practice of answering a query without limit to the amount of time required, mailing the response and cover letter to the patron, stating in the letter the amount due for copying fees ($.25 a page), and asking for a donation which is used exclusively to build our genealogical collection. I do limit the number of families I will do per query (two) and I will only search five obituaries at a time. If the research policy is being abused by the patron, I do reserve the right to refuse a query.

I probably have a 98% response on my receipts. Most people will add a little for the donation even if it's only to round off the copying fees to the next dollar. The most I have ever received as a donation was $100. The average amount is probably around $15.

While it may be a sounder business practice to not send out the reply until I have received money, it would add more work and I'd simply misplace my research while I was waiting for the money.

Hope this helps. Lu Eisler

Subject: Keep pressure up on the Senate & House

Friends,

S. 2603 did not get to the Senate floor for a vote this morning--it will likely happen tomorrow--which means that we have more time to call our Senators today and urge additional funding to the CP&B and the S&E to ensure adequate funds to produce the 2000 version of the U.S. Code and distribute it to depository libraries.

It also appears likely that H.R. 4516, the House FY 2001 Leg Branch bill, with its extreme cuts to the CP&B and S&E will go to the House floor tomorrow.

I am preparing another broadcast e-mail to our entire membership, but urge you to begin your calls now.

SENATE ACTION: Please call your Senators immediately since S. 2603 may be considered on the floor tomorrow, May 25th. Express your gratitude that the Senate Appropriations Committee has restored level funding for the CP&B and the S&E, but urge that GPO be provided with additional funding to cover the costs of the 2000 print version of the official Code:

$2.8 million for Congressional Printing & Binding
$1.6 million for Salaries and Expenses

HOUSE ACTION: Please call your Representative immediately and urge him/her to vote "no" on H.R. 4516 as reported out of the Appropriations Committee yesterday. It cuts CP&B funding for the print production of core titles (CR, FR, CFR, U.S. Code) and, by decreasing the S&E funding by 61%, ends the distribution of any print publications through the Federal Depository Library Program.

Lastly, as you make your calls, invite your representatives to visit your library during the Memorial Day recess next week, or offer to meet with them at their district offices.

Thanks, Mary Alice

Our Local History person just asked if I knew of a mail list for Local History Librarians. We are really working on increasing and improving our collection, and she'd like to get ideas. Does anyone know of such a mail list?

Linda:

I don't know of any Local History Collection lists, but if none turns up, I'll be glad to chat with your local history person either on-line or by phone. I've been doing local history for almost 20 years, and have an idea or two. My e-mail address is catherine@kpl.gov. Phone: 616-343-2845.

GENLOC, a discussion list on family and local history services, is intended to promote international networking among librarians and other professionals engaged in family and local history services.

GENLOC provides a medium for exchanging information and experiences, seeking assistance with difficult reference questions, promoting common professional interests and concerns, and encouraging cooperation.

GENLOC is a closed, unmoderated list, belonging to the Genealogy and Local History Discussion Group in the Social Sciences Libraries Section of IFLA. This list is sponsored by IFLANET and the National Library of Canada. Submissions are being archived.

Your list owner can be contacted at:
GENLOC-REQUEST@INFOSERV.NLC-BNC.CA

To subscribe to the list,
send an e-mail to the following address:
LISTSERV@INFOSERV.NLC-BNC.CA
In the body of the message type:
SUBscribe GENLOC YourFirstname YourLastname

To post messages to the list, send messages to:
GENLOC@INFOSERV.NLC-BNC.CA

Common LISTSERV commands

GENLOC uses a UNIX-based LISTSERV(tm) software.
Information about advanced commands for LISTSERV can be retrieved by sending the following command:

To: LISTSERV@INFOSERV.NLC-BNC.CA
Message: INFO REFCARD

All commands to `LISTSERV` should be in the body of the message (starting on the first line), and NOT in the subject field (which should always be left blank). Since the software is English, all commands to `LISTSERV` must be in English.

`SIGNOFF GENLOC`

* To remove your name from the list.

`INFO GENLOC`

* To obtain information about the list.

`GET GENLOC WELCOME`

* To obtain a current copy of this Welcome message.

`SET GENLOC NOMail`

* This will stop list postings from being sent to you until you reset your status -- please use this when you go on holidays or will not be reading your email regularly.

`SET GENLOC Mail`

* This will reset your `NOMail` status and allow you to begin receiving messages from the list again.

`SET GENLOC DIGest`

* To receive one message per day that contains all the daily postings to the list.

`SET GENLOC ACK`

* To receive a system-generated acknowledgment each time you post a message to the list.

`SET GENLOC NOACK`

* To NOT receive acknowledgments each time you post to the list (this is the default).

`SET GENLOC REPro`

* To receive "carbon copies" of messages that you post to the list (this is the default).

`SET GENLOC NOREPro`

* To NOT receive copies of what you post to the list.

`INDEX GENLOC`

* To obtain an index of monthly archival notebook logs for the list.

`GET GENLOC LOGYYMM`

* To retrieve a monthly log file from the list archive (containing previous postings to the list), specify the year and month by replacing the `YY` and `MM` (e.g., `GET GENLOC LOG9904` will retrieve the log file for April 1999).

`REVIEW GENLOC`

* To get a list of non-concealed subscribers to the list, preceded by the list header parameters.

`SET GENLOC CONCEAL`

* To conceal your name and e-mail address from anyone using the REVIEW command for this list.

HELP GENLOC

* To obtain a short list of common commands.

While it is not dedicated only to Local History Librarianship, your person might be interested in H-Local. It is the H-Net list for Local History.
There are a number of local history librarians on the list and it may be of some interest, if not help. Further information about the list can be found at <http://www2.h-net.msu.edu/~local/>. Mary Mannix PS I too would be happy to talk to your person, although I don't have quite 20 years worth of experience, I have lots of opinions. :)

Heritage Quest is publishing a number of individual state 1800 census indexes. These are hardbound books, and are edited by Raeone Steuart.

I'm interested in knowing your opinions of the quality of the book, and their contents.

This new set from Heritage Quest is very important. They have re-indexed the 1800 census, ADDING more than 5,000 names and so many corrections to the existing names that they lost count. Another new feature is the addition of the towns to the index.

Heritage Quest has consistently had the best census indexes on the market and this new set is a perfect example of it.

Note that they also have re-indexed the 1790 census AND they are issuing the new indexes to the 1870. This is a great time for census indexes.

Hi:

I have a few additional books to trade:

One hundred years of the CSA 1854-1954 (history of the Czech. Soc. of America)

Speculative Freemasonry and the Enlightenment (Not genealogy related, more a history of)

A general introduction to Domesday Book 2 vol.(includes really early landowners of Eng.)

Traveling to England to find your roots

Scandinavian Genealogical Research Manual

I will trade any of these for books relating to OH, PA, WV or any general genealogy topic.

I will be happy to supply more details on any title.

Speaking of this being a great time for census indexes...
Does anyone know where I can buy print census indexes for North Carolina only?? I've seen these in other libraries and I noticed some of them were printed in Utah. Does the LDS do these? Anyone know the purchasing info? Thank you very much!!
