We?ve had a local researcher list for decades, but the numbers on it keep dwindling as people have dropped off. We?re thinking of discontinuing it. There is a disclaimer on the list that states that we do not endorse anyone on it.

Because of the local APG chapter and all of the BCG members in this area, we also refer people to them if they don?t want to use our own research service.

We have a local APG chapter. We refer researchers to their list. For many decades we maintained a listing of local researchers and some people felt that we were endorsing those on the list. The APG and now Colorado Chapter of Association of Professional Genealogists is a fairly geographically and specialized diverse group of folks.

My institution is reviewing our for-hire researcher list, and I?m wondering how other libraries/archives handle this. What criteria, if any, do you use for inclusion on your organization?s genealogy researcher list? Do you list everyone that asks, only those in your geographic area, or some other criteria? How often is it updated?

Please respond off-list, I?d be happy to repost summarizing the responses. Thank you in advance.

We do have a researcher list that's comprised of a number of people known to the Center, and which includes their area of expertise. We do indicate that the Center doesn't endorse anyone in particular and that costs are negotiated with the individual researchers.

Thanks for the nudge, I need to update ours soon!

Subject: [Genealib] [Awards] Achievement awards, travel and research grants from RUSA: Nominations due Dec. 15
Message-ID: <647E7C0598258B4194D9A731DAAE59E80217EFCE@BE144.mail.lan>

Have you reviewed the plethora of achievement awards and conference travel and research grants offered by the Reference and User Services Association?

We have a lot of awards to offer-even for non-members-in the areas of reference, genealogy, business reference, adult services, readers advisory, resource sharing and technology.

We encourage you to review the list of available awards below, then:

?   Forward it to a colleague or distribution list who might be interested in this information.

?   Nominate yourself for an award (or two)

?   Nominate someone else for an award (or two)

The deadline for all nominations is Dec. 15, 2012, with the exception of the BRASS Gale Cengage Learning Student Travel Award, which has a deadline of Jan. 31, 2013.
Award criteria, nomination forms and instructions for submissions are available at each of the award?s web pages, which can be accessed by clicking on the award names below.

More information about these awards, including nominating instructions, can be found at the RUSA Awards Web page <http://www.ala.org/rusa/awards> . Monetary award amounts are subject to change without notice and are contingent upon donor funding supplied at the time the award is presented. Questions about these awards should be directed to the committee chairperson or to Leighann Wood, RUSA awards program coordinator at lwood at ala.org.

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION RECORDS

 FOR GENEALOGISTS

Presented by Zack Wilske

        Part of the lure of family history is to find information about an ancestor?s voyage to America and to identify his or her place of birth in the old country. The federal government has been collecting information about immigrants for many years. The former Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and now the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service (USCIS) are the focus of those collection efforts.

        Zack Wilske, an historian with USCIS, will present ?An Introduction to Immigration and Naturalization Service Records for Genealogists? at Bull Run Regional Library on Thursday, November 15, beginning at 11 a.m. This presentation will use case-study examples to provide an overview of federal records relevant to family history researchers.   His talk will cover arrival and naturalization records available from both the USCIS Genealogy Program and the National Archives. Mr. Wilske?s research interests include the history of the INS and its records.

        Please call (703) 792-4540 or email relic2 at pwcgov.org to register for this free program.

GENEALOGY 201: BEYOND THE BASICS

Presented by Tish Como

Genealogy 101 introduced basic resources and techniques for researching your family's history.   Genealogy 201 presents alternate resources to enhance your family's history and advanced search techniques to help maximize your results from online databases including census records, passenger lists, maps, and books. RELIC's Tish Como will present this program on Tuesday, November 27, beginning at 7 p.m. in the Bull Run Library community room.

To reserve a seat for this free program, contact RELIC at (703) 792-4540 or at relic2 at pwcgov.org <mailto:RELIC2 at pwcgov.org> .

GENEALOGY 101

Presented by Don Wilson

Those curious about their family history have an opportunity to learn about methods, strategies and resources for tracing their roots. The hour-long program, conducted by Don Wilson of the RELIC staff, is scheduled for Thursday, December 6, at 11 a.m. This program, ?Genealogy 101,? will highlight the numerous free genealogical resources available at RELIC and will explore basic techniques for tracking ancestors. Whether you are just beginning or have been exploring on your own for awhile, this program is designed to help you get going.

To register for this free program email Relic2 at pwcgov.org, or call RELIC at (703) 792-4540.

Hello All,

I am looking for an institution I can refer a patron\volunteer\colleague to; she is trying to get Sanborn maps, over the years, in downtown Little Rock. She has the address, she knows how to use Sanborns, happy to wait, happy to do whatever she needs to do, etc. She has been having some trouble finding an institution who can assist her. Can anybody out there help her? Or, recommend an institution who can be of assistance?

Much thanks!

Quite a few Sanborn maps are on line. I can see where there are 13 maps listed for Little Rock at ProQuest.

Thanks, Sue!

But we are in Maryland and there are no institutions in our immediate vicinity that get the ProQuest Sanborn product for the entire country.
 Actually, the few that got Maryland have been cutting them, sadly. :(

Thanks, nonetheless.

Dear library colleagues,

There has been such high demand for our "Intro to Spatial Literacy" course that we've increased the number of available seats and give you a bit more time to sign up! Individuals can still register online through this Sunday, Nov. 4. Groups interested in registering should contact registration at ala.org or (800) 545-2433, option 5, for more information about how to sign up.

More information about the course is at the bottom of this message. Here's the registration link:
     http://www.ala.org/Template.cfm?Section=oloc&Template=/Conference/
ConferenceList.cfm&ConferenceTypeCode=L

Please share this message so that others can take advantage of this fantastic learning opportunity.

Mapping"

You may use tools like Google Maps in your personal life all the time for locating restaurants and local businesses, driving directions or planning trips via public transportation, but have you considered how this same technology could be used at your library to improve library services?

RUSA's online course ?Introduction to Spatial Literacy and Online Mapping" is the perfect opportunity for librarians and library staff from public and academic libraries to gain a basic understanding of Geographic Information Systems (GIS) technology and learn about specific technologies they may be exposed to at the library. Registration for this course, which runs Nov. 5-25, ends on Thursday, Nov.

REGISTER ONLINE NOW:
http://www.ala.org/Template.cfm?Section=oloc&Template=/Conference/
ConferenceList.cfm&ConferenceTypeCode=L

Know someone who should enroll in this course? Please forward this message!

If you've already taken this introductory course or have a good working knowledge of GIS and want to go further, consider enrolling in "Spatial Literacy II: Incorporation of Maps and GIS", which shows you how to harness these technologies for reference work, library projects, library administration, collection delivery, instruction, outreach and library promotion. The next session of this course begins Dec. 3.

Wouldn't it be awesome if several of your staff could take this course and your library could reap the benefits in improved library services? Group discounts are available! Rates for two or more registrants from the same library, library network or library system start at $110 per person.

Have your patron check with any nearby university library which has a large map collection. There should be a microfilm or microfiche collection available which might cover the entire country. University Publications of America produced some microfilms with the title "Fire insurance maps from the Sanborn Map Company Archives" in the 1990s, and I had the impression that the Library of Congress produced a set of microfiches of the Sanborn maps in their collection. A checklist of LC's Sanborn maps is: "Fire insurance maps in the Library of Congress : plans of North American cities and towns produced by the Sanborn Map Company," published by the GPO in 1981; online version at:
http://www.loc.gov/rr/geogmap/sanborn/

Also to be consulted is "Union list of Sanborn fire insurance maps held by institutions in the United States and Canada" by R. Phillip Hoehn, 2 vols., 1976-77, updated online at:
http://lib.berkeley.edu/EART/sanborn_union_list although it specifies
"Microfilm sets and online maps produced by commercial firms are generally not included." Thus the need to ask a good map librarian in your vicinity.

Hello Everyone,

Thank you all for your suggestions. I should have clarified. We were looking for an institution with original Sanborns. She needs the colors, she is an architectural historian. My bad, sorry!!!   That said, we have also found a solution. Thanks to all!

Much thanks!

Tip: If you find more than one source for a Sanborn map of a specific area, look at all of them. Sanborn maps were updated repeatedly by pasting new information overtop old. Maps with the same original date may have different updates on them, each providing the description of a site on different dates than the original and each other.

Hello genealogy librarians,

Does anyone have any advice how to help patrons focus their thoughts and narrow their questions when they ask for "genealogy help" at the reference desk?

How do you encourage patrons to stay "on task" and not ask 10 questions before you've finished understanding and answering the first one? Also, I find it very difficult to follow people when they are verbalizing their family tree. I need to see it on paper to understand it. Preferably in a timeline or family group/pedigree format. Does anyone ask for these to be filled out before tackling a question?

I'm wondering if some kind of "research worksheet" might be helpful for them to focus their question. Does anyone use something similar? I'm thinking of developing such a form for use in our library. I would like to gather the following information:

   - Patron Name/Email Address/Phone Number
   - Research Question
   - Name of ancestor
   - Names of parents and siblings
   - Time frame (birth and death dates preferable)
   - Geographic Location
   - Sources already found
   - Sources sought
   - Additional information relevant to query
   - Research Advice (to be completed by librarian)

These are just some things that come to mind. Does anyone else have any input - or even examples of something similar?

I look forward to hearing how you all manage!

Thanks in advance.

One method that I use frequently is to ask, "Tell me what is the one specific piece of information that you would really like to locate today?"
That tends to bring out an answer such as, "I really want to know where my great-grandfather was born," or something along those lines. With that goal in front of us, I am then able to suggest strategies to find the required information and channel the researcher in the right direction.

Kristen:

Over 25 years ago, your situation was an issue I personally could not cope with. So many people come in with nothing in their hand. It is only in their head.

To make it easier on me, I put together a beginner's kit that has a pedigree chart on the back. I tell them right up front, I am unable to focus (especially now that I am older) and/or retain all the information they have in their head. I need to see it written down on a pedigree chart. I do not beat around the bush. I give them the kit and any handouts and show them the table with a pencil. I will spend time showing them how to complete the chart. When I finally can make some sense of their ancestors dates and places, we talk.

I also created over 60 pathfinders on various subjects. Once I find out the area they are researching, I hand them a pathfinder.

I understand your problem. I usually start by asking them what it is they are trying to find. Often what they say they want to find isn?t really what They are looking for. I just keep asking questions and it helps to narrow it down.
Often they will have some paperwork. Usually it?s not a pedigree chart for family group sheet but it helps me to see it written down.

It?s usually the beginning genealogist that are the hardest to help. I just keep telling myself someone helped me when I was beginning and it helps keep me sane. We have a lot of the flyers the LDS church used which has a pedigree chart and tells how to fill one out. It helps them to understand the info that is needed to help them.

If someone calls in advance I always request that they bring in as much as they know written down. A lot of people think they only need to bring in a name. They don?t realize they also need dates and places.

Kristen

I think just about all of us have had this problem. Here is what I do, I don?t

always ask the ancestors name right away. I ask them the time frame the family was in our county (or wherever they lived). This helps me to know which section of our room would have the appropriate books for them to search in. This usually works. I then ask the family name so I can determine how else to help them. I also agree with Deborah. Try to get them to narrow to the most important question they want answered.

Good Luck!

I often explain to them how our library is oriented and that our materials are grouped by subject ? marriage records, obituary indices, military records, etc. I also tell them that most of the information they?re looking for is found by state and then by county, and try to get them to consider what kind of information they might be seeking for each ancestor. This seems to help people focus. In addition our policy is to give each new person a blank ancestor chart and advise them to work from themselves back so they are able to recognize each generation from the links to the more recent generation.

see it on paper to understand it. Preferably in a timeline or family group/pedigree format. Does anyone ask for these to be filled out before tackling a question?

I'm wondering if some kind of "research worksheet" might be helpful for them to focus their question. Does anyone use something similar? I'm thinking of developing such a form for use in our library. I would like to gather the following information:

  *   Patron Name/Email Address/Phone Number
  *   Research Question
  *   Name of ancestor
  *   Names of parents and siblings
  *   Time frame (birth and death dates preferable)
  *   Geographic Location
  *   Sources already found
  *   Sources sought
  *   Additional information relevant to query
  *   Research Advice (to be completed by librarian)
These are just some things that come to mind. Does anyone else have any input - or even examples of something similar?

I look forward to hearing how you all manage!

Thanks in advance.

I agree with Sandy. I always ask the time period. This helps narrow the focus on available resources that I would have. I try to guide them in acquiring death dates if unknown. I also ask them which research question/problem would they like to start with first. If someone is a beginner, I do have a pathfinder on resources that will help them start pedigree charts and explain different types of genealogical records. I also have a pathfinder to give that lists our microfilm titles.

I think just about all of us have had this problem. Here is what I do, I don?t always ask the ancestors name right away. I ask them the time frame the family was in our county (or wherever they lived). This helps me to know which section of our room would have the appropriate books for them to search in. This usually works. I then ask the family name so I can determine how else to help them. I also agree with Deborah. Try to get them to narrow to the most important question they want answered.

Good Luck!

Hello genealogy librarians,

Does anyone have any advice how to help patrons focus their thoughts and narrow their questions when they ask for "genealogy help" at the reference desk?

How do you encourage patrons to stay "on task" and not ask 10 questions before you've finished understanding and answering the first one? Also, I find it very difficult to follow people when they are verbalizing their family tree. I need to see it on paper to understand it. Preferably in a timeline or family group/pedigree format. Does anyone ask for these to be filled out before tackling a question?

I'm wondering if some kind of "research worksheet" might be helpful for them to focus their question. Does anyone use something similar? I'm thinking of developing such a form for use in our library. I would like to gather the following information:

I try to get them to tell me the last documented time and place for the ancestor they are researching.? IF, I can get them to tell me that, it helps them focus and helps me pull the materials that are actually most likely to be relevant to their research.? Sometimes I have to politely listen to the family narrative which also confuses me, before I can get them focused.

Once they start finding stuff, then I can ask more questions based on what they have found that lets me stay focused on the things they are most likely to need.? I also tell them I can only keep track of one thing at a time when they begin with the barrage of questions.? I smile broadly and use my MOST drawly southern accent which people often assumes means we are dumb.? It seems to work.? ;-)

I also ask if they have family group sheets and pedigree charts with them so I can use those.? I will have to think about creating another piece of paper to keep up with.

Unfamiliar looking folks with bags of binders generally have a good grip on who and when they are researching in our area.   We have a brochure which lists local sources they might not have discovered. There are a few things not digitized yet!
But often these folks start by asking where the old newspaper on microfilm are.
If they haven?t already used our obit index online, we show them that, and let them roll.   Then I wander by and look at what they?re finding and what it suggests.

For beginners, we offer a brochure with a pedigree chart and sample family group sheet. If they already have a chart sketched out (names and maybe dates but locations are less likely), then my question is ?Were they from this area??   If so, it?s on to our local brochure, show them links to the obit index, cemetery records, city directories, census etc.   If not, census will more likely be our first stop.

I don?t want to make them copy over info onto a special worksheet for me if they already have it laid out in standard form. But that written version sure does help both them and me see where the gaps in research are.

The simplest thing to do is hand them a Pedigree Chart. We tell people that if they can get back before 1930 or 1940 then we can help them. Filling out the chart forces them to focus. Some of them even realize that they don't have enough information to get started, and they take it home and ask family members for help.
If they are able to complete three or four generations then it makes it easier for us as well.

Greetings from www.genealogical.com <http://www.genealogical.com/> ! Here's a recap of the top 2012 new products and related developments from America's oldest and largest publisher of genealogy reference books and CDs.

Once again, we want to call your attention to "Genealogy Connect," the new online product available from Gale-Cengage. In short, Genealogy Connect is the digital version of the Genealogical.com (i.e., Genealogical Publishing Company and Clearfield Company) reference book collection, enhanced and delivered by Gale-Cengage. Genealogy Connect contains 550 titles at release and is expected to exceed 1,500 titles from Genealogical.com in due course. For more information on Gale Genealogy Connect or to request a trial, please visit www.gale.cengage.com/genealogy or contact Kristina Massari at kristina.massari at cengage.com.

Second, we encourage you to subscribe to "Genealogy Pointers" our free weekly e-newsletter. Every issue of "Genealogy Pointers" contains special product offers and excellent tips for tracing your roots. "Pointers" readers are the first people to learn about new products, and they also get our Friday "Today Only" mailings announcing products discounted for 24 hours by 40% or more! Many genealogy librarians are already taking advantage of these outstanding opportunities. Shouldn't you be next?

To do so, simply go to http://www.genealogical.com/content/pointers_signup.html.

By the way, all new subscribers receive a coupon code that entitles them to a 20% discount on their next order!

Finally, if you haven't visited our site in a while, you are probably missing out on some terrific publications released in 2012. These publications include an growing series of laminated, lightweight, four-sided research aids entitled Genealogy at a Glance that are perfect for the reference desk; a new edition of the best book on Irish genealogy; Jamestown People to 1800: Landowners, Public Officials, Minorities and Native Leaders, by Martha W. McCartney; a new edition of Jackie Smith Arnold's all-purpose guidebook on kinship; the 42nd and final volume in V. L. Skinner's series of Maryland Prerogative Court Records; and a dozen or more new titles from tireless authors David Dobson and Jeff Bowen. Just scroll down and click on any one that strikes your fancy.

Dear Mentors and Colleagues:

Thank you to everyone who has shared their experiences and advice. You all have given me some great ideas. I think one of the problems we face now is the "beginning genealogist" who has already had a lot of success finding the "low hanging fruit" on Ancestry but is not really sure how and where to find records if they don't come from a search engine.

Although I love doing online research, sometimes I think it lends itself to a sort of unfocused approach to doing genealogy. I'm just as guilty as the next person of starting out researching one person and chasing another one down the rabbit hole. Serendipity is great, but being disciplined and focused in your research really pays off.

I feel like this is one of our greatest challenges. Thanks again to everyone who responded. Great ideas, all. It's also nice to know I'm not alone.

Kind Regards,

Kristen McCallum

Lynette,

Thanks SO MUCH for the McAdams book! I have already found information I did not know about my family in it.

I would like to make a contribution to your library. Should I make the check out to the Carrollton PL and put "genealogy collection" in the subject line?
Will that get it to you to be used for more genealogy resources?

I will also send you a check for postage.

Thanks again!

Laurie

Nearly all the books and periodicals are spoken for! Thanks to each you who is willing to give them a good home. I will be in touch with everyone off the list in the next few days with details about getting your materials to you.

Thanks again,

I have a large collection of Texas Almanacs. They are taking up 2 shelves in the genealogy room. Are they of any use to keep? Is the information available online?

What type of researcher would use them? I have been in charge of the collection for 3 years and to my knowledge no one has ever used them.

I do believe they are helpful. But I tend to forget to use them myself. They do have history and names that can help with research. They do have different information in each year. I'm not sure if they are online anywhere. Texas history and names are everywhere-online, in other books, and on microfilm. There can be duplicate information in the almanacs and other books and databases you already have. The almanacs can help with research on weather, sports, and other historical events during specific time periods. I remember John Phillip Colletta saying he used almanacs to help with writing his family history. He would find out the weather or other events during a marriage to fill in what was happening around the event.

We have to sometimes remind patrons of the value of the books. Show them off in displays or talk about them on blogs. With you asking this question, it has stirred up some ideas for me. I forget to remind patrons of the "history" books that can help them with their research. They also count as Texana books. If you want to have a Texas collection, you probably should keep them. But yes, the information in the almanacs probably could be found in other books or online.

I have a large collection of Texas Almanacs. They are taking up 2 shelves in the genealogy room. Are they of any use to keep? Is the information available online?
What type of researcher would use them? I have been in charge of the collection for 3 years and to my knowledge no one has ever used them.

Laurie,

I'm so glad the book arrived safely, and that you were able to use it to your advantage.   Knowing that this book, or any book, has been beneficial to someone's research is quite gratifying enough, however, any donations are always welcome.
Checks made out to Carrollton Public Library and marked '"genealogy collection" as you suggested will earmark the funds for the purchase of more materials.

I have moved to another branch since this "project" began; however, I am still responsible for genealogy and local history. Doing the research remotely and by appointment will be interesting. My new address is below.

Best of luck in your research,

Lynette,
Thanks SO MUCH for the McAdams book! I have already found information I did not know about my family in it.

I would like to make a contribution to your library. Should I make the check out to the Carrollton PL and put "genealogy collection" in the subject line? Will that get it to you to be used for more genealogy resources?

I will also send you a check for postage.
Thanks again!

Thanks, Lynette!

I hope this was a promotion. In this day & age, having a library job is huge.

The McAdams family lived next to my ancestors, the Whites, and my great-great-grandfather's sister married a McAdams. They are all over East Texas.

Best of luck with your new job and with the remote-by-appointment work.

Take care,

I have a Mercer County PA sesqui-centennial 1803-1953 program, 28 cm, maybe 50 pages. The usual with lots of ads, photos, program of activities in center. Free to anyone with a relevant collection. Includes a history, "The Rolling Years", by Albion Bindley. Very good condition, clean, unbent, some discoloring/foxing on cover. (I assume our donor didn't notice it was Mercer Co. PA and not WV.)

Please reply off list to susan.c.scouras at wv.gov<mailto:susan.c.scouras at Sometimes old albums of photos are amongst the donations people drop off. There's no identity or way to know who or where they belong. I love these old photos prior to 1920s. We have a digital collection but it's for Collin County, Texas. We try not to include photos from other areas unless we can prove they have people from Collin County in them. I'm trying to decide what to do with these orphan photos.

Are there any suggestions?

By the way, I was at an antique store the other day. They had old orphan photos for $5 a piece no matter what the size. Maybe we should just try to sale them?

Thanks for any suggestions!

I will be doing a catch up index after the holidays.

My understanding is that PERSI only indexes the titles, not every name.
That is why when you write an article it should give name, place & time where they pertain.

Do you mean the a table of contents or an index. I haven?t

done an index in years because I thought PERSI was indexing.

I will be doing a catch up index after the holidays.

   The table of contents is on page three. Go to the OGS website and choose publications. From there you will get the instructions for the Quarterly.

I am in need of the table of contents for the most recent issue of the OGS Quarterly. A digital image is fine, or even just a list of the article titles. I checked PERSI, but the latest issue they have listed is in 2009. The OGS website restricts access to that information. Thank you.

We recently held an after hours genealogy lock-in at our library. A patron that attended is trying to trace her Native American ancestry. She has narrowed it down to Brazil, Indiana as a possible starting point but doesn't know where to go from there. She does not have tribal information or family name. She was a bit vague on details but I said I would try to find a starting point for her. Do any of you have any suggestions for a person new to genealogy and tracing Native American families?

First things first. She should still work her way back through the vital records, census etc. for a long as she finds her family living in the wider non-Native American community. The 1900 census has an extra section for Native Americans on tribal lands. It asks for native name, English name, and in the pattern of birthplaces, ?what tribe are you; what tribe was your father; what tribe was your mother.?

The key there is ?tribal land.? Brazil, Indiana was not tribal land in 1900. But she can start searching the family back from that point until she finds family living where Native Americans were known to be living.

We do Native American research every day and we constantly preach "use a pedigree chart and document, document, document." Basic good genealogy research, starting with themselves and working back is the way to go. Gather the documents as they go:
census, marriage, birth and death. Pay attention to the information every time race is listed. We also recommend looking at the geography and what tribes once lived in the area or still call it home.

New Product From Fort Worth Genealogical Society....

=== THE TEXAS MARRIAGE COLLECTIONS OF FWGS ===

This CD-ROM contains three publications from the Fort Worth Genealogical Society.

1. - The Marion Day Mullins Collection of Early Texas Marriage Records
     This 9,569 page collection of 60 e-books contains over 116,000 marriage records from 56 Texas counties. Each book contains it?s own index, plus there is an All County Master Index. This was published and sold by the Society for many years, yet it was made available only on microfilm
and microfiche.

2. - Marriage Records of Early Texas 1824 - 1846

This is the republication of an out of print book which contains every known marriage record that survives from the Republic of Texas era. This 170 page book was published by the Society in two printings in 1970 and 1980.

3. - The Footprints Collection of Texas Marriage Records
This 1,556 page e-book is a republication of all Texas marriage records that have been printed in our quarterly journal, Footprints, and it's predecessor,
the Bulletin. Records originate from twenty counties, some containing as few as one or two pages of information and others having as much as 80 to 200 pages.

Please visit the FWGS website to find a detailed description of the contents of the CD, and for a convenient order form.

Dear Librarian

I thought you would like to know that we have now published a new volume in our THE ROYAL HOUSES OF EUROPE series of Genealogical Works:

The German Dynasty of HESSE

The genealogy of the Darmstadt, Cassel, Homburg and Philippsthal branches of this influential western German dynasty are set out in this volume: The Grand Dukes of Hesse and by Rhine, the Electors of Hesse-Cassel, and the Dynasty's various Landgraves. The morganatic lines of Battenberg, which developed into the British Mountbatten family; Hanau and Reichenbach-Lessonitz are also detailed. The book shows the connections to the British, Russian and Danish royal families, and includes descendants now living in the U.S. 319 pages.

?P. Arnold, 2012 ISBN 978-0-9569100-7-3

The books are offered at a discount to libraries, at a price which includes delivery by post/courier to your door.

Details as follow:

THE ROYAL HOUSES OF EUROPE

This series of books, published in England, provides an extraordinarily wide-ranging genealogy of noble families across Europe, including descendants who live in the United States and Canada:

It consists of 31 volumes, covering all the leading European Royal Dynasties and their descendants. They provide a full royal genealogy laid out in inter-connecting royal family trees of the Royal Houses of Europe. The books cover the reigning monarchies of Europe, the great Imperial Dynasties and the former monarchies of Europe. They include the British Royal House, now the House of Windsor, descended from Queen Victoria, and the British dynasties of Stuart, Hanover and Saxe-Coburg-Gotha. The dynasties of Hohenzollern, Romanov, Habsburg, Bonaparte and Bourbon have separate books on each, together with the Monarchies of Scandinavia, the Benelux, Liechtenstein, Iberia, Monaco, Italy and the Balkans, and the former German Kingdoms. In all cases the full descent is shown, extending to related noble and commoner families, including in the U.S.A.

This year we published a new volume:

The BONAPARTE Dynasty of FRANCE

The Descendants of Carlo Bonaparte, father of the Emperor Napoleon, and the Beauharnais descendants of the Empress Josephine, down to the present day, now including the full Bonaparte-Wyse descent. This includes many noble families of France and Italy,. It includes a range of United States and British descendants. 226 pages.

?P. Arnold, 2012 ISBN 978-0-9569100-5-9

ALL THE BOOKS INCLUDE FAMILIES NOW RESIDENT IN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

See our website for full details of each individual book (press on book title for description).:http://www.theroyalhousesofeurope.co.uk.

They are essential tools for Genealogists, particularly in researching their European ancestry. They are supplied to libraries in the U.S, and Canada, and also in the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and many European countries. They are also supplied to European royal families, academic libraries, genealogists and the media.

Our copy of "Index to Loudoun County Virginia Chancery Suits 1759-1915" by Marty Hiatt and Craig Roberts Scott is missing page 110; page 109 was printed twice. Does anybody have a copy of this title with the missing page who could email or fax it to me? This page should have defendants' names between Bayne, Henry T. et al and Belt, Elizabeth V. et al.

Thanks in advance.

I suspect many if not all copies of the book have the same error. Ours has the same problem.
