1-1-1960

De Soto first visitor to Bickel Mound

Hampton Dunn

Follow this and additional works at: http://scholarcommons.usf.edu/flstud_pub

Part of the American Studies Commons, and the Community-based Research Commons

Scholar Commons Citation
http://scholarcommons.usf.edu/flstud_pub/2889

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Digital Collection - Florida Studies Center at Scholar Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Digital Collection - Florida Studies Center Publications by an authorized administrator of Scholar Commons. For more information, please contact scholarcommons@usf.edu.
DE SOTO FIRST VISITOR TO BICKEL MOUND

By HAMPTON DUNN

TERRA CEIA ISLAND --- The site of an ancient Indian village provides a quiet isolated retreat for visitors who turn off busy U.S. 19 south of the spectacular Sunshine Skyway. The first "visitor" to this interesting Indian mound was the explorer Hernando DeSoto who some experts say landed near Bradenton in the year 1539.

The State-owned property is called Madira Nickel Mound, named for Mrs. Karl A. Bickel, who joined her husband, the late Karl A. Bickel, long-time president of United Press Internation, in donating the property. It was the first archeological site in Florida to become a State historic memorial. In 1970 it also was added to the National Register of Historic Places.

The mound itself, 100 by 170 feet in base dimensions and 20 feet high, is the most outstanding feature of the area, which was the site of extensive Indian habitation from near the beginning of the Christian era until after the time of Columbus.

Some historians claim this site was the village of Ocita or Ucita, mentioned in the accounts of the DeSoto expedition as the initial camp of the Spaniards, but no concrete evidence has been found to substantiate this theory. A local historian, Mrs. Mary Ethyl Clyatt, told the St. Petersburg Times that "DeSoto took the wooden structures from on top of the mound and made houses for his men."

The interesting mound is a mixture of shells, black dirt, animal bones and pottery, and apparently was constructed as a substructure for a building, perhaps the chief's resident or a temple.